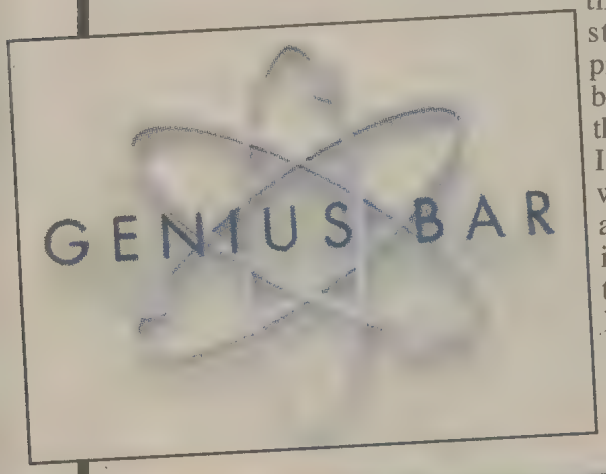
THE BARFLY

By Alan Tecchio

Even though I am pretty good about backing up the info on my laptop I had done a bunch of work recently while visiting my dad in Florida last weekend and had not been able to save it. (As it turned out, I could have backed up to my Ipod but I hadn't thought of doing that!!). Our break here at the mag goes fast and the last thing you need is to worry about not having a working machine when you get back to biz. Enter: this week's hero and yes, it's a bar. Well, sort of... It's the Genius Bar at the Apple Stores in our area. I know sometimes the wait can seem big when they are busy but often, (as happened to me) people skip out and you get called relatively quickly. I was at the store in The Short Hills Mall and the Genius who saved the day for me was Barrett Hartman. As Barrett picked through my startup issue I picked his brain a bit just to try and throw him off. :) I learned that he was not sent to any kind of training from Apple to get his job. He learned all the tech stuff on his own and passed some sort of evaluation to get the "Genius" title. Not only did he fix my problem, he was patient and calm and very personable. Oh yeah, and there is no charge for his services. Quite the antithesis to today's retail experience me' thinks. That's what I love about Apple-they do their own thing with everything. Thanks again Barrett!



So now that I can go forward with my digital life and this column, welcome to 2005! I hope this year rocks for all of you. Upon arriving home from the Apple Store I caught that cold that I'd been skillfully evading since it started going around back in the Fall. Resultingly weekend plans to see Some Girls at Dingbatz ended up falling through as did pretty much everything else on the Barfly agenda. Oh well, the sickness was bound to find me sooner or later. But enough of my bitchin'...

For the single people out there-check out the Affinity Friday Night Singles Party every week at Doc's in The Holiday Inn of Totowa, NJ. This weekly party found a new home at Doc's a few months ago and it's been building up quite nicely. Call 973.256.0606 to learn more about it.

Something a lot of bars don't offer is lunch delivery. That's not the case though at Jimmy Geez in Haledon, NJ. They've not only got a great menu, but they will bring it right to your door if you order it Mon-Fri from 11:30AM-2:30PM. If you'd rather rustle up a barstool and eat there you'll get a 16oz soda for free with your lunch. Their regular kitchen hours for the eat-in crowd are from 11:30AM till 1:30AM. Surf to www.jimmygeez.com or call 973.790.9729 to see what else they've got going on.

On a side note, if you read the story on Mexicali Blues that ran in our two week holiday issue there was a great photo of Chris Robinson that was missing photo credit. At long last here is the credit for that sweet shot. It was taken by Virginia Kamenitzer who has a lot of great pics on Mexicali's website: www.mexicalibluescafe.com.

See ya at the bar!

BY DAN LORENZO

I just watched the test pilot for the TV show "Steppin' Out With Chaunce Hayden". I think all reality television is only watched by white trash...but obviously I was anxious to watch a TV show that I would be in. Man, I am ugly in the winter! All pale and white. Everyone looks better with a tan...after seeing the show I am tempted to go to a tanning salon for the first time in my life. I haven't played basketball in 3 months because my knee is all messed up. So on TV I saw a pale, white fat guy. On the pilot Chaunce goofed on me, saying "He's still trying to be a rockstar." Well this week is my 11th year selling advertising and I wouldn't quit my job for any band/tour situation. Being a poor musician was fun as hell from the time I moved out of my mom's house at age 21 until the day I applied for this job because I couldn't find a quarter for a bagel. Being a poor dude in a band doesn't hold the same appeal to me now that I'm 42.

While I was on vacation last week I spoke with one of my best friends since the 8th grade for the first time in a year. My buddy Paul was stationed in Kabul, Afghanistan. It was an interesting conversation. I just don't trust the media reporting of the news. Paul just laughed at the American coverage. "They just hate George Bush so much" he told me. Paul told me Afghanistan was like living in the times of Jesus with the addition of cars and television sets. I asked how the people were. He said 90% of the Afghanistan population he came in contact with were very happy our military are there. They say it's the best it's been there in twenty years. Paul feels positive about the future of Iraq too. He's talked with comrades who have told him the people there are way more thankful we're there than the media would let on. I asked Paul about the Americans who are so upset that we are there. Paul said he would rather die in a foreign country fighting for us than take a chance of having his kids die from terrorists on US soil. Paul signed up for the Army. People ask me "If you agree with this war why don't you go fight." The same reason I'm not a firefighter. I'm scared and I don't feel a calling for those jobs. Everybody has got to do what they feel they should in life. I hate the fact that we lose good people everyday in Iraq. Hopefully after the elections it will calm down over there. Thank God there are people like Paul with the balls to keep us safe.

PS Even my wife would leave Brad Pitt if he wanted to have kids.■

Though the non-snow lovers out there must be loving this moderate Winter weather, I wish that it would get cold and stay there already! I bashed out a few runs at Mountain Creek the other day while we had one of those cold stretches and it felt nice to be on the hill. MC is so close that you can hit it up after work and still get home at a reasonable hour. That rules.

As for keeping warm that frigid day…Thanks go out in a big way to the Duofold base layer tops and bottoms I had on. The ones I wore were from one of their two cold weather lines. The first line being Insulayer and this one; Varitherm. Specifically designed for active use, Varitherm wicks moisture away from your body to great effect. We should all know by now that dressing in layers is the way to go in the cold. That base layer is a crucial step in the layering process. That's why these jammies worked so well in the freeze. They allowed for good movement and still kept me warm all day. You can check 'em out at Duofold.com. If you like cutting turns when it's nice and cold they are as essential as wearing electric clothing when riding a motorcycle in similar temps. And like the moto world, snow lovers also share a distinctive culture which makes most of us generally cool with one another. That thought in mind, how about a website that lets you register your snowboard's serial number for free in case it gets stolen. Yeah, unfortunately, every scene has its uncool element that do things like rip off your stuff. If it does take legs and you are registered, you can surf back to Snowboard Registry.com where Lauren Traub Teton will have all the numbers listed in a chart. This allows potential used board buyers to check if your board is legit. Though it may not get your board back to you, if it was honestly lost or just forgotten, a good samaritan, (read most everyone in the scene) would now have a way to return it to you. Don't worry, neither your contact info. nor name are listed. That's where she comes in. :) Lauren also runs two other cool sites the first being SnowboardEvents Calendar.com which extensively does what it says for the Eastern U.S. in a user friendly way. The other site is devoted to helping snowboarders evolve and stay safe. It can be found at www.Snowboard Secrets.com. This one comes with an e-newsletter that she writes. With a philosophy like "It's just bad karma to buy and ride a board that was stolen from a fellow snowboarder" ya know the newsletter has to be cool. Sign up now. Nuff said.

Beth O
Interview by Chaunce Hayden

When I last spoke to Beth Ostrosky in June of 2002, the stunning hard working model seemed like a deer caught between the headlights. Overwhelmed by the media circus that pounced on her newfound relationship with radio legend Howard Stern, Beth struggled with the unwanted attention. However, thousands of paparazzi flash bulbs later, Beth has stepped out from Stern's loving shadow. These days Ostrosky is shining on her own, not only as a model, but also as a television personality, columnist and spokesperson for the North Shore Animal League.

During the past three years, Beth has appeared on the cover of FHM magazine not once, but twice. The leggy blonde has also made a name for herself as co-host of Spike TV's Casino Cinema [airs Tuesdays at 9pm] with Steve Schirripa of The Sopranos. In addition to her busy schedule, this 32-year-old beauty has found the time to put out her third sexy swimsuit calendar. And if that wasn't enough, each month Beth taps into her nurturing side as a modern day Dear Abby for FHM magazine's "Ask Beth & Isaac" advice column.

Indeed, if the start of 2005 is any indication, Beth-O fans can look forward to many more months and years of swimsuit pleasure!

The following is an up close and personal chat with Howard Stern's better half...Beth Ostrosky.

Chaunce Hayden: I heard about your recent uncomfortable situation with a New Jersey Transit train conductor. What exactly happened?

Beth Ostrosky: Yeah, I was working with another model in New Jersey and ended up having to take the train home. It wasn't like [the conductor] touched me, and I've had other weird things happen to me on the subway through the years. But this was just so creepy! The way the conductor just stood there staring at me really freaked me out. I came home very disorientated.

Were there other people on the train with you?

It was around 3 p.m. so it wasn't super crowded. The seat in front of me and a seat behind me were open. So I'm sure that made him brave.

Did you get his badge number?

I didn't even think of it at the time. That's my problem, I don't think of things until afterwards. But are you ready for this? From New Jersey I got on the subway home and there was this adorable little girl, probably around 17 years old, and she starts screaming! This guy whipped his [penis] out and started rubbing it on her! And this train was packed! It was crazy that all this was happening in one day!

What were the other passengers doing?

Everyone was just disgusted by him! Then he ran out of the train and the girl just fell over, she was shaking and crying. I felt so bad for her.

Not for nothing, but that's why I never take trains.

You don't? But I feel it's such a New York thing to do.

Well, you must admit that you don't see many high-profile models riding the subway these days.

But if I stop doing that, I'll feel like a part of me is being taken away. Although a lot of people are starting to recognize me, so I guess I have to start being more careful. But I don't think the conductor would have been so bold if he knew who my boyfriend was.

Besides your traumatic train ride, things have been going very well for you since we last spoke in 2002. Would you agree that your career has improved greatly over the past three years?

Improved? I wouldn't say improved, it's just different. I was perfectly content being a working model in the city. That's pretty much why I came to New York. So I would say my career has changed and things are amazing!

Fame has a way of creating opportunity. Obviously, your popularity has opened doors that normally wouldn't be open for the average working model.

Yeah, definitely. I've been offered opportunities that in the past I never would have dreamed of doing. So it's been a wonderful surprise.

Which opportunities have surprised you the most?

Hosting a show for Spike TV. But that was a legitimate audition. Granted, they knew my name. But I went in and kicked butt! So now I'm hosting a show called Casino Cinema.

How would you describe the show?

Basically, every Tuesday night they show a male-oriented movie like "Jaws" and my co-host, Steve Schirripa, and I come on every 15 or 20 minutes and play a card game with a celebrity guest, and they can win prizes for people. It's been really fun! Recently we've had Tommy Chong, Triple H, and Artie Lange on as guests. Maybe even you can come on! The ratings are growing and it seems people are really starting to like it! In fact, they just ordered 12 more shows! Speaking of opportunities, I was also just asked to be the national spokesperson for the North Shore Animal League. That to me is the coolest of everything! That's something I don't think I ever would have been asked to do had I just been a working model.

For Advertising Information Call 201-703-0911 so-mag.com

Do you get paid for that?

No. But I'm so willing to do it! I'll be doing a lot of promotion with puppies and kittens and bringing awareness as to what the North Shore Animal League is. I'm willing to donate all of my time to that! Someday Howard and I will have a farm with lots of animals. That's a huge thing we have in common!

You also write an advice column in FHM magazine with Isaac (Ted Lange) of Love Boat fame. How many letters asking for advice do you get a month?

All the questions go to FHM. So I'm sent just the five questions that are going to be in the magazine. I try to answer them as honestly and truly as I can. The problem is that FHM is such a sexy magazine that they always spice up my answers! My editor will call me up and discuss my answers, and he always seems to get something out of me that I didn't write. But they have my full approval by the time it goes to print.

Has your FHM column inspired strangers to approach you and ask for advice?

Absolutely! Just yesterday some guy came up to me and said he needed some advice on what to get his new girlfriend for Valentine's Day.

Has anyone ever told you that you're a very nurturing person?

I am? I love that! That's such a compliment! I really do care about people! I like making people feel good, and if I can give them some advice that will help them, that's the greatest feeling! I'm no expert, but I really do care!

When you're offered these exciting opportunities, in the back of your mind do you ever wonder, "Was I offered this because of who my boyfriend is?"

I never think that. I think initially the curiosity is there because of whom I'm dating. But I feel that I'm not going to get offered the job if I can't measure up. Plus, I don't think I would be asked back for things if I weren't doing a good job. So, yeah, I'm lucky that I have that initial interest for them, but from there I feel that I carry it.

I recall a few years ago when Fox 5 News offered you an on-air job that unfortunately turned into nothing more than a Howard Stern promotion to boost their ratings. How did that make you feel?

They were really crappy because they approached me! But I told them I really didn't need to do it and that I didn't want it to be promoted as, "Howard's girlfriend stops by!" I think it was sweeps week for them. But they said my name on its own was enough for it to be great for all of us. So we shook on it. And lo and behold on the news that night they promoted it by saying, "Stay tuned because Howard Stern's girlfriend is stopping by!"

That must have hurt.

It was annoying and I felt betrayed, but I think I've gotten hardened since then.

So you feel more media savvy now than you did three years ago?

Yeah! Definitely! Don't you think talking to me now that I sound more confident? Remember how petrified I was the last time you interviewed me? I wasn't able to embrace all the attention. But this has been my life now for the past five years. So I'm trying to enjoy it and embrace it a lot more than I have in the past. I used to be really afraid of it.

Why?

I guess I was insecure with myself and what I might say. I didn't know if I fit into that world. I was just a girl who fell in love with a guy who was extremely high-profile. Now the media attention is just a part of our lives, and that's just the way it is.

In other words, you don't care what people say or think anymore.

That's true. That's absolutely true!

Every day we read about Hollywood divorces. Does that make you nervous regarding your own relationship and what might happen if you and Howard were to eventually get married?

No. For me, marriage is not something that I'm dying to do. It's just not something that I ever saw for myself. I see [marriage] as very sad when it doesn't work out. I've seen relationships flourish and be beautiful. But a lot of things come to an end, and that's just how it is.

Do you believe that marriage changes the positive chemistry of a relationship?

I don't know about that. I've seen some really successful marriages. Relationships just take their course and either they grow or they dissipate. I feel some people just aren't meant to be married to that particular person.

Are you meant not to be married to Howard?

I'm happily committed, but I don't feel it's necessary to have that actual agreement. Unless kids are involved!

That brings me to my next question.

I don't personally want to have kids. I never was one to want to have kids. I'm 32 years old and I still don't have that urge! My brother just had a baby and it's a beautiful thing, and it's great to visit and see and hold the baby. But it's not for me. Even when I was a little girl I knew that I wasn't going to have kids. But that can change! (Laughs) It's more of an issue with my family than it is for me!

Would you consider one day adopting a child?

I'm one hundred percent for it! I think more people should do it, especially people who are taking all those fertility drugs and trying their hardest to get pregnant. I feel the option of adoption is so beautiful. I just saw a special on Chinese girls and how they need people to adopt them. I feel that would be the way I would go if motherhood were for me. But it's not! I don't feel the maternal instinct to do that. (Laughs) I'd rather save animals! I have my bulldog and I'm happy as can be! I feel like I gave birth to her!

You said the topic of having children is more of an issue with your family than it is for you. How much pressure do they put on you to have children?

Well, they don't put pressure on me, but it comes up all the time. They keep telling me how beautiful my baby would be!

Okay, so you're not having kids. At least not anytime soon. But marriage is another story. How do you feel about pre-nups?

(Yells) It's not going to happen! It's a non-issue for us! I don't spend any time even thinking about it. But if I were in a situation where we both wanted marriage, I feel a pre-nup is definitely fair and I'm all for it.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but aren't you wearing a ring that looks suspiciously like an engagement ring?

I wear rings on that finger, but it's definitely not an engagement ring. I switch my rings around all the time. You never know what finger I'm going to have a ring on. I'm definitely not engaged, but Howard has bought me rings. In fact, he bought me another diamond ring for Christmas. It has a bunch of diamond clusters! It's gorgeous!

How many carats?

I don't even know because I don't care about that stuff! I don't even ask! I don't even know what it's worth! Granted, I'm sure it was expensive because it's gorgeous, but who cares! Trust me, if we were ever to get engaged, the world would know, that's for sure. Besides, do you really think Howard is ever going to get married again?

He claims he'll never remarry. But I also know that he loves you very much.

He does! We're happily committed.

Sometimes you can love someone so much that you can't help but take that next step.

If it were important to Howard that we get married, then I would be happily for it. But we're so committed. We don't need to be married. I live with him and we share our lives together. It's beautiful. I just don't need that

MORSELS

By Mike Morse

Times change. Attitudes change. Even my underwear changes, although not nearly as often as The Wife would like. But the point of this article is not my poor hygiene, it's the fact that you can't expect things to stay the same. I found this out the hard way a couple of weeks ago. I called a few of my college drinking buddies to arrange a "guy's night out," which is manspeak for "I'd like to spend one evening not discussing what pattern would look best for the wallpaper in the kitchen." I suggested that we meet at our old college hangout to drink a few beers, flirt with the waitresses and pretend we didn't have to call our wives three times during the night to let them know what time we were coming home.

Seeing the guys in the old setting was quite a shock. Joey had a beer gut that made him look like he should have his feet in stirrups getting ready to deliver septuplets. Larry had lost so much hair he was in danger of losing his mammal status. Stan's face had enough lines and wrinkles to make me want to warn him that his microwave oven may have a serious leak. I was the only member of our little group to successfully elude the ravages of time. I owe this to proper diet, exercise, and a complete and total denial of how I actually look.

We sat down in the same booth we always sat in back in our college days and ordered drinks. Joey was on a diet, so he ordered club soda. Larry's been having a problem with his ulcers, so he had a Sprite. Stan just got out of rehab for the fifth time, so he ordered black coffee. I drank my usual vodka martini, disappointed in the boys but happy to know I was surrounded by prospective designated drivers. Larry was a little pissed off that the jukebox had gotten rid of all the Wang Chung, A Flock Of Seagulls, and Billy Idol tunes in favor of what he called "that rap and hippity hop crap."

Well, at least we could swap cool stories about the old days, like the time Joey got drunk, threw a garbage can through his ex-girlfriend's window, then puked in her mailbox.

"Hey!" I said, getting the ball rolling. "Remember the time Joey got drunk, threw a garbage can through his ex-girlfriend's window, then puked in—"

"Mike!" Joey interrupted. "Let's not go through that old story again! Hey Stan, did you finally re-wallpaper your kitchen?"

"Yeah, Joe," Stan replied. "I went with the sunflower pattern."

"Guys, I gotta get going," Larry said. "I promised my wife I'd help her make brownies for the church bake sale this weekend."

"But, but" was all I managed to say before they put their coats on and scurried out the door. Oh well, at least the martinis haven't changed.■

THE NEW YEAR DIET DILEMMA

Hello fashionistas! Welcome to 2005, a new year filled with fresh possibilities. And while I am hoping for much positive upheaval in the upcoming months, I am willing to wager that one fact remains the same for most of my readers: The number one resolution on your list is Lose Weight. That one always makes it to the next year, doesn't it? And along with that renewed resolution comes a swarm of new diets guaranteed to make us skinny. (The Atkins Diet, sweetie, is soooooooooo last season.)

This year, everyone is talking about the diet tome "French Women Don't Get Fat". Written by a Frenchie who is in her 50s and still a size 6, she explains how those chic Europeans stay forever slender. The good news is that you can eat whatever you want, but in much smaller portions. The bad news is, the book is disdainful of American eating habits. (Gee, the French being condescending to Americans? There's a bold new concept!)

Another hot diet platform is "The Switch Eater", which targets whether or not you are an emotional eater who snacks under duress. This diet teaches you how to respond to bodily cues as opposed to emotional cues, and thus drop the weight. I don't think it will come as a shock to any of us that sometimes we eat just because the food is comforting as opposed to necessary, but what the hey.

As if this dynamic duet of diets isn't enough, Kirstie Alley formerly of "Cheers" fame, now famous primarily for being obese is the new Jenny Craig spokeswoman, in commercials where she looks at the camera, and breaks the fourth wall announcing, "Hey, you're chubby too!" I have to say I fell for the J.C. hype years ago, and forked over my money for their pre-packaged low-calorie food. Cat food tastes better. People, the bottom line is there is always going to be someone out there who claims that they have a miraculous cure to melt the pounds away. Save your money: There is no immediate panacea. There is one surefire way to lose weight and keep it off, and I'm going to share with you the secret that worked for me:

1. Eat less.
2. Exercise more.
3. Do it forever.

Pretty simple, huh? Now if everyone could send me $100 c/o Steppin' Out magazine…

WHO'S A BIGGER ASSHOLE, me, for buying a 3 thousand dollar plasma TV that will cost 500 dollars in 5 years or Joe Buck, the FOX sportscaster who lost it on live television when Vikings wide receiver, Randy Moss pretended (key word: pretended) to take his pants down and moon the crowd as part of a touchdown celebration during Sunday's NFL playoff between the Packers and the Vikings. The Answer: Joe Buck. Buck described Moss' antics as "a disgusting act" and added, "It's unfortunate we had it on our air live." One has to wonder if Buck has ever watched any of his own network's programing? If Paris Hilton of "The Simple Life" and "home porn" fame, only pretended to pull her pants down in front of millions of viewers, her show would be canceled by the very network that Buck claims was embarassed. It's a football game bro. Relax.

IN OTHER NEWS: Unless you've been vacationing on Mars you already know about the terribly sad news that Brad Pitt and Jennifer Aniston are breaking up. Just the thought brings tears to my eyes. Sure 150,000 people recently died in what may be the worst natural disaster of all time. But please God, not Brad and Jen! Now you've gone too far.

THIS PAST WEEK LA Police once again raided Michael Jackson's Neverland raunch…I mean ranch. Wouldn't you think by now the guy would find a better place to keep his kiddy toys? Anyway, this time the cops searched Jackson's bathroom and found it stocked with Jack Daniels bourbon and Pinot Noir wine. Cops also found four "Barely Legal" porn DVD's and a Hustler-produced documentary "Pimp Up, Ho's Down" and a host of skin magazines. What scares me about this new report is that Jackson's bathroom sounds alarmingly like somebody else's bathroom I know... MINE!

marriage title. We have a perfect relationship.

"Perfect" is a very strong word. What's the secret to a perfect relationship?

It just works. We're so compatible and we have fun together. We tell each other our problems. We're there for each other. We give advice to each other. We're equals in the relationship. It just works. We're full of bliss and we connect on every single level.

In other words, Howard is your soulmate.

Soulmate is such a weird phrase. But if there is such a thing, then yes, Howard is my soul mate.

Anna Benson, the wife of New York Mets pitcher Kris Benson, said that if she caught her husband cheating she would sleep with the entire Met organization. What would you do if you caught Howard cheating?

Well, I can understand the urge to want to do that and have him feel the same pain. We've had this discussion many times and it's always fun to talk about other people. But if there were ever the urge to do that, we would first of all tell each other and then leave the other person just to have respect. Howard is such an honest and true person that I feel he would live up to that promise. But I would be very sad if Howard cheated. I would be extremely sad and devastated and I would feel our pact with each other was broken. But I don't see that happening.

Sad and devastated, but not angry?

I'm sure anger would set in at one point. But I wouldn't go out and sleep with Ralph! [Writer's note: Ralph Cirella is Howard Stern's longtime stylist.]

For the last few months, Howard has been in the news almost daily because of his controversial decision to take his show to Sirius satellite radio. We all hear how the stress and anxiety of the FCC's crackdown has affected Howard on the air. But how has his battle with censorship affected him at home?

Well, you know my boyfriend. He's always filled with stress and anxiety. I was there through all the decision-making and all the pressure, but right now it's just anticipation and excitement! It's been a blast! Other than the horrible pictures of us together in the papers! I don't know why I have to be put in the pictures whenever news hits! That's the only negative thing. But it hasn't affected our relationship at all. It's been totally fun!

Beth Ostrosky with her bulldog, Bianca Romijn Stamos

Does Howard ever bring a bad day at the office home with him?

Never! We never fight!

Is that healthy?

You know Howard. He's the king of talking, and I'm a talker too. So we talk through everything. We agree on so much. We respect each other's opinions. We just don't fight.

Lets talk about when Howard gushes over women like Pam Anderson, Angie Everhart, and Jenny McCarthy. Does it ever upset you?

All men do! Come on, look at them! They're beautiful. But he's mine and I'm very secure with it. Yeah, they're beautiful, and you can always wish you had something that they have because they look physically perfect. But the bottom line is he's mine! It's not like he comes home and stares at a picture of Pam Anderson in front of me. But what he does on the radio is different.

Did you ever feel threatened by Howard's former flame, Angie Everhart?

No! No! I think she's a beautiful girl, but she's a part of his past. I've never met her or seen her. I know that they're still friends and they talk every once in a while. But she's not in my life at all.

Would it be awkward if the three of you ended up in the same room?

Not at all. There was one point in time where it came out in FHM that I said I would kick her ass! But I was joking when I said it. So I told Howard the next time he talks to Angie to tell her it was said in jest. I think that they discussed it and now it's like a little joke. Actually, I would love to meet her. I admire her. In my business, she's been at the top and I admire what she's done. She's a good actress and extremely beautiful. I'd love to meet her some day.

Both you and Howard are very close to former Hollywood couple John Stamos and Rebecca Romijn. Were you surprised they got divorced?

Not at all. They're such great people, but they're even better apart!

Did they ever fight in front of you?

Not fight. They were just very different. I think they were madly in love at one time, but it's their story to tell. It happened and it's better for both of them that they're not together.

So often when a couple you're friends with splits, you're forced to choose sides. Was that the case in this situation?

There was no choosing of sides. If John calls us it's John, and if Rebecca calls it's Rebecca. It's all good. Everyone is fine when it comes to that.

Let's talk about New Year's resolutions. Did you make any?

This is silly, but I definitely want to read more books. When Howard and I were on vacation we ended up reading books the whole time, and it was so fulfilling. I realized how much I missed doing that. I've been so caught up in these silly magazines and what I've been reading in the tabloids. So my new goal is to definitely read more books and also to eat healthier. I have the worst diet in the world.

Is it true you eat nothing but candy bars?

Ughh! I love chocolate! I eat it every single day! I'm not talking about a piece of chocolate. I'm talking about boxes of chocolate. Basically, I eat a box of chocolate every day. So I'm trying to eat healthier things, not instead of, in addition to.

How do you stay so thin?

I run. That's it. I don't do weight training. Although I need to start. Pretty much that's all I eat. I love it. Last night I had a box of chocolate and then I had a whole container of Pringles and a diet Dr. Pepper. That was my whole diet yesterday. It's horrible! So I guess I'm not living up to my resolution because Pringles are not the healthier addition to chocolate.

Yet Howard eats so healthy.

Howard is so healthy! I'll sit there with my box of chocolate and he'll sit there with his few slices of frozen banana at night when we're snacking.

So Howard's diet hasn't rubbed off on you?

No. I don't like frozen bananas. I had a sweet tooth since I was a little kid. It's definitely genetics. My mom's 5'10" and she's skinnier than I am and eats worse than me!

Let's talk about your 2005 swimsuit calendar. You've been putting them out since 2003. I'm assuming they're selling well.

They do very well! That's why I continue to do it. The people who bought it initially have been buying it every year. It's been really great!

When we last spoke, you weren't so confident that people would buy your calendar. Are you surprised by the demand?

Um … I think initially everyone was curious about me. People hadn't seen a lot of pictures of me. So at first I think it was the curiosity factor. But now it's almost like a yearly tradition! It's just really nice. It's cool.

Do you agree sex sells?

Yes, but not in my case. My pictures are "cute" sexy. They're not "alluring, hot chick" sexy.

Do you honestly feel that guys who buy your calendar are looking at you as cute rather than sexy?

Perhaps. I don't know! I don't consider myself sexy at all. (Laughs) It's just hard for me to think about that!

I can guarantee you that if a guy buys your calendar year after year, it's not because he thinks you're cute.

(Laughs) Okay! Okay! If they think I'm sexy, that's great!

Sexy, but never nude?

I'm not naked! The closest I get is that shot of my hand covering my boob with my bikini top off.

Leonardo DiCaprio Flying High

Somehow, it feels like the passing of an era: The eternally boyish Leonardo DiCaprio recently turned 30 years old.

DiCaprio is happy to no longer live in the eye of a hoopla hurricane, the way he did a few years ago when "Titanic" made him the hottest star on the planet. Always enormously convincing on screen, DiCaprio is just starting to realize the potential everyone saw back in his first major movie, 1993's "This Boy's Life."

The superstar nurtured the production of his Howard Hughes biopic, "The Aviator," shepherding the script into the hands of an initially reluctant Martin Scorsese, who was also his director for "Gangs Of New York." It is fitting that DiCaprio should portray a fabulously wealthy public figure, although Hughes was also tormented by mental demons that drove him into paranoid seclusion.

On the personal front, DiCaprio continues to squire around his longtime girlfriend, Brazilian supermodel Gisele Bundchen. And, the California-born champion of environmental causes, also made a series of speeches during the recent presidential campaign. DiCaprio will next work with Scorsese on "The Departed," a crime drama set in Boston.

Q: What was it about Howard Hughes that most fascinated you?

A: As an actor, you're constantly searching for that great character to play. Being a history buff and learning about people in our past and amazing things that they've done, I came across a book about Howard Hughes. He was set up in the book as basically the most multidimensional character I could ever come across. Often, people have tried to define him in biographies but, no one seems to be able to categorize him. He was one of the most complicated men of the last century.

Q: Could you relate strongly to anything about his personality or his life?

A: I think he certainly took things farther than I could ever imagine. He was such an obsessed human being. He was so obsessive about everything he had gotten involved with, whether it be planes, women or films he made. That is the direct result of his obsessive-compulsive disorder. I wouldn't go to those extremes.

But, certainly his being a part of films that have gone on for many months and sitting there with the director trying to get things perfect and doing them over and over again, was something I think Scorsese and I immediately identified with.

Q: Are there any parallels between the fear of celebrity Howard Hughes had, and your own desire to keep your privacy?

A: My reasons for being a private person are different from Hughes. He had an intense fear of being around people and germs. My reason is that I'm an actor and I want people to believe me in different roles and not necessarily know too much about me. I want to be around, in the business, for a long time.

Q: Considering the generation gap between yourself and Martin Scorsese, what is your working relationship like?

A: What I'm going to say is going to sound like a cliche, but I cannot tell a lie: he is every actor's dream to work with. He is not only one of the greatest filmmakers of all time, he's like a film historian. He's a professor of film.

The man has seen almost every film ever made, up until 1980. We actually found that we fundamentally share the same tastes in a lot of different things, not just films, but music and art. And, we have a great work ethic together. We get along. He loves to have actors come to the table with an array of different information and new ideas. He welcomes that more than anyone else I've ever worked with.

Q: Howard Hughes is such an intense personality, could you mentally shake that off at the end of each day?

A: I've always been pretty good at being able to go home and be me again. But, I'd say more than any other character I've played, this one stayed with me the most, especially with his obsessive-compulsive disorder.

We all have obsessive things we do to some degree, it's a primal part of our brain mechanism. I remember, as a child, stepping on cracks on the way to school and having to walk back a block and step on that same crack or that gum stain. So, for the movie, I kind of let all that stuff happen and was constantly stepping on things and reorganizing things. Sometimes, it took me a while to get to the set, having to step on tons of things.

Q: You have a powerful scene in which Hughes has a mental breakdown in a movie screening room. While performing, did you ever feel like you were close to really loosing your mind?

A: Sometimes yeah, definitely. You sort of get into your own head space and don't really want to talk to anyone. I spent a lot of time just sitting around in the screening room alone. But pain is temporary, film is forever. That's the fun part, knowing that what you're doing on that day will actually show up on screen. That's the best feeling.

Special Report

"WHY YOU FAIL YOUR WORKOUTS"

Forth Degree Black Belt and Trainer Damian Ross, Speaks out about the problems with health clubs and fitness gimmicks.

First of all, let's get something straight- You don't fail your work outs, your workouts fail you! Health Clubs are designed to let you fail. It's not in their best interest if you succeed. The following are the top 10 reasons why your health club fails you:

1. Lack of space. What if every member showed up at the same time. Parking is bad enough as it is, you probably couldn't get near the door. The fact is, health clubs are not designed to handle their entire membership.

2. Lack of personal attention. After you sign up you are on your own, unless you can afford a personal trainer, but that gets expensive. It seems the only attention you get is when your membership is due.

3. Not enough equipment. Doesn't it seem like everyone is doing the same work out you are? By the time you finally get on the equipment you have to warm up all over again.

4. Training partners don't show up. We all have lives, sometimes your buddy can't make it and you have to go it alone.

5. Useless Machines and Equipment: Take that chrome thing and melt it down. The truth is you only need a fraction of what the Health Club offers.

6. Useless Classes. What's next? Yogi-lates-spin class? I mean if one of these spandex geniuses make up something else I'm going to loose my mind.

7. It's a meat market. It seems that more people are interested in hooking up rather than working out.

8. It's Time Consuming. By the time you finally get through your routine, you get home just in time to do it all over again

9. No one to motivate you. Personal trainers are great if you can afford one. But who will be there for you when you are having an off day?

10. Your results come slowly if you get any at all.

Listen, I was a former high school and collegiate athlete who had gained weight after my college career ended. I worked out at the Health club 4 to 5 days a week, I even earned a second degree black belt in Tae kwon do, coached varsity wrestling and I STILL did not meet my goals. It was only when I started training in Tekkenryu Jujutsu that I met an exceeded my goals. Now I can do 31 pull-ups, run a sub 6 minute mile plus I lost 40 pounds and my body fat percentage is at 10%! I am living proof that Tekkenryu jujutsu will put you in the best shape of your life. But don't take my word for it:

Customer Testimonial

"I've always had an interest in martial arts but it wasn't until turning 30 that I actually decided to do something about it. Shortly after starting Tekkenryu Jujutsu, I cancelled my gym membership because this was a much better workout and a lot more fun than going to gym. What was most appealing is that simple, effective techniques were taught from the very beginning that anyone can use to defend themselves under a stressful situation. Since training at ZenShin, I have gotten in great shape, have more energy, and have never felt more confident in my abilities to handle myself. It has also been a great stress release after work.

It is one of the best things I've ever decided to do."- William B., Pompton Lakes, NJ

What if I told you there is a fitness alternative that will let you meet and exceed your highest goals. You will always have a training partner and you will always have a personal trainer. There will always be enough space and you will always get an incredible workout. Sound too good to be true? I would think so, too. But if you sign up and you are not satisfied I will give you your money back!

And Besides... Knowing Tekkenryu jujutsu is cool.

Can you throw a grown man over your head? Can you end a fight with the edge of your hand? Can you hit with the power of a freight train? Would you like to? You will if you let me train you.

I always hear, "I took it in college" or, "when I was a kid…" But now I don't have time. Let me ask you, Can you save your own life? How far and how fast could you run if you were being chased? Can you scale a five foot wall? If someone came into your house tonight, can you protect yourself and your loved ones? If these things don't concern you - don't bother calling me, enjoy life with blinders on. But, if this gets your stomach turning, you need to call me now.

Now, training in Tekkenryu jujutsu is not an enlistment in the military. If you want to get treated with the respect you deserve, call me now. I am not Tiger Schulman; you will not find a Tekkenryu jujutsu dojo on every corner and if I have my way you never will. How do you feel about nudity?

I'm not really uptight about nudity. If it's gratuitous, that's one thing. But when I see a naked women in a European magazine I think it's one of the most beautiful things in the world.

Have you ever been photographed nude?

No! Thank God I didn't! Thank God!

So many up-and-coming models do nude layouts early in their career. What stopped you?

My mother! At this point I'm older now. But when I was younger there were opportunities that had come up. My agency asked if I would be interested in doing Playboy. But I said no because of my mother. She's very moral and that would be upsetting. But at this point I'm an adult, and if I did a nude layout it would be in a very classy way. I'm not naive anymore. I'm not young.

So if it weren't for your mother you would have done Playboy?

No, no! I'm not saying that. That's not my thing and it's not my image. I don't think I would have been successful as an All-American catalog girl had I gone that route. For the most part, the girls who do Playboy have it come back to haunt them. They really don't get anything but short-lived fame. I don't even know if I would call if fame, for that matter. When I came to New York I had a purpose. I came to model, and I think it helped that I didn't have that background. (Laughs) I'm just glad there are no naked pictures from my past resurfacing right now, because that would really suck!

I'm just glad there are no naked pictures from my past resurfacing right now, because that would really suck!

Tomorrow Hugh Hefner shows up at your door with a briefcase containing a million dollars in cash. Would you do Playboy?

(Laughs) I would do it if the money was going to the North Shore Animal League, and throw in a million dollars for me while you're at it! But it hasn't been offered to me and I don't see that happening. I never say never. But if it does happen, I want photo approval!

When you're modeling for your calendar, do you actually make love to the camera?

(Yells) That term just skeeves me out! I'm just laughing and being me. I'm with a crew that I love and a photographer that I adore! It's just me and my friends spending two days on a beach having a blast.

Is it tacky for a guy in a relationship to buy a swimsuit calendar? Would you be insulted if Howard purchased a Brooke Burke calendar?

No, not at all! I'm trying to promote my swimsuit calendar, why would I ever admit to that? (Laughs) I'm sure Brooke Burke already sent my boyfriend her calendar! They all do! I love when other girls send my boyfriend their calendar because I get ideas and enjoy looking!

Did you watch the Sports Illustrated Swimsuit reality television series?

No!

What about America's Next Top Model?

No! I haven't seen that either. I can't believe it! You know why? Howard doesn't watch it and he's pretty much in control of what I watch. He has his shows that we have to watch.

Judging by your calendar photos, it seems obvious you have what it takes to be a Sports Illustrated swimsuit model.

Oh stop! You're just flattering me! But thank you!

What's your opinion of the Sports Illustrated models?

Those are supermodels! I love the annual Sports Illustrated Swimsuit issue! I look forward to it every year. I think it's done so well and the girls are absolutely perfect!

Do you have any interest in appearing in the Sports Illustrated Swimsuit issue?

Of course I would do it. But it's not my ultimate goal in life, and I've never been asked, but it's definitely a huge deal. Those girls are exquisite and God bless them. It's just not something I've had the opportunity to do. But of course I would do it in a second.

Do you think you're good enough for Sports Illustrated?

(Long pause) You know what? No. I'm really insecure with myself. I always see problems, so the answer would be no! But if I have a shot, I don't want to ruin it! But I definitely don't think I'm on that level.

What kind of insecurities do you have?

Oh, we all have our insecurities. But none that I want to say because then they'll be noticed by onlookers, Chaunce! I still haven't gotten over the fact that you once said I have a blue vein by my eye! You are so mean!

It's really not that bad.

No, you're so right! I totally see it. It's just something I never fixated on. I look at it now and think, "Oh, what a cute vein." Now when I see it I say, "Hello, vein!"

You're making me feel bad.

That's my flaw. I have a blue vein on the side of my eye. It's not a big deal until somebody points it out and you get a complex. (Laughs) I'm just giving you a hard time! I'm not mad at you.

It's ironic that models, of all people, are the most insecure when it comes to their physical appearance.

Oh please, we're the worst. That's because we're always being evaluated and rejected.

Speaking of being rejected, you were the target of terrible criticism on the HowardStern.com message boards. In fact, the hate on the boards was so terrible that Howard eventually eliminated it.

It really made me sad. I'm insecure as it is, but reading some of those things really sucked. But I don't think it ruined my self-image. I still get paid a lot of money every single day to model. I feel I've been a really positive thing in Howard's life, and what we have is so real and beautiful that is just makes me think that people aren't accepting of me. That really makes me sad that they can't be happy for him and his happiness. That's how I viewed it, and I admit it right now that when Howard's message board went up I went on it and read those things, and it was really tough. I decided to never read it again. It was brutal!

Were you surprised by all the animosity directed toward you?

Yeah, because Howard put up the message board to try to unify everyone and try to create positive energy and it kind of backfired. But yeah, it did affect me. Of course. I'm human.

When the time comes, would you consider Botox or any other form of plastic surgery?

Like I said before, I never say never. I see girls who are doing it and I see how amazing they look. But I'm so lucky that my genetics keep me looking so much younger than I am. I hear every day that I look like I'm in my twenties, and that makes me feel great. So I haven't been faced with that. But in time perhaps. I'm not opposed to it.

Not to change the subject, but was there a moment in 2004 when you cried?

I cried when my brother called me from the hospital to tell me my niece was born because I was so happy for him. That was the one moment that sticks out in my mind where I can recall crying.

Was there a moment in 2004 when you laughed so hard you couldn't breathe?

Howard makes me laugh like that literally every day. He is just so funny! My stomach hurts from laughing so hard! Sometimes Howard will come home and talk about the show and some of the funny things that happened. I'll ask him how the show was today, and he'll have to take a moment to think about who was even on the show. They all seem to run into each other! I find it fascinating that he really doesn't remember who was on the show!

Do you listen to the show?

I'll listen if I'm in a cab and I'm going to a shoot and the driver asks if I want to listen. But I don't wake up every morning and turn it on. But I'm not opposed to listening to it like I was when we first started dating. I don't get confused anymore. I know who Howard is off the air.

Would you ever consider writing a book?

If I were to ever write a book it would be about something very personal that happened to me, and it's a specific incident in my mind that I've only talked to friends about. But it has nothing to do with my boyfriend.

A traumatic incident?

Yeah.

Hmmm.

Hmmm. Maybe I'll take a stand and talk about it publicly because I feel it's something that happens to a lot of people. We'll just leave it at that for now.

Finally, did you ever watch the movie "Private Parts"?

Yes! When Howard and I first started dating I said I wanted to see it, so we started to watch it together. I think it was really hard for him and it was a little bit weird for me too. It was a love story and it was really beautiful, so I was rooting for them! It was definitely a little bit weird. So he turned it off and said, "Let's get something to eat." And we never got back to it. But I ended up renting it and watching the rest by myself. I just remember thinking what a great movie it was, and why we didn't finish watching it together?

Think there will ever be a sequel?

Perhaps someday.

Starring you?

Me or my character? I am the worst actress! I am not pursuing acting! I'm very uncomfortable doing it! But I don't ever see it happening!

Okay, Son...you can go to sleep now. All our home security systems are in place.
Could we go over the checklist again, Dad?
I locked all the windows and doors, and I sprinkled cornflakes on the stairs and in the hallway, so we'll hear any footsteps.
Good. Did you put the butter on all the outer doorknobs?
Butter...?! I'm not going to do that. I think this "security" obsession of yours has gotten a little unhealthy.

Las Vegas, Nevada, January 6, 2005. The silicone boobs enter the convention long before the overly tanned, bleach-blond ever does. She's followed by her entourage, her suitcase pimp, er, boyfriend, her best Barbie doll girlfriend, and three or four gawking passerby's who have seen her latest film. She's walking quickly, because she knows she has to get to the Sands Expo center before her call time, before the men, and some ladies, have lined up to take pictures of her finest assets.

It's like this every January, when the industries leading porn people get together to meet, greet and do business. Their business may not be what ordinary people normally do, but for these porn people it is their business, every day of every year. It's the business of sex, a whole other, not as taboo as it once was, world, but that's the way they like it. This is a world where nudity is more normal than being fully dressed, and where sex isn't an act of lust, like or love but a part of literally getting down to business.

This was my second, non-consecutive, year heading out to Vegas, but the first time I went with the intention of soaking up the industry for my own, personal gain. I saw old flames, like the porn director I once dated for a brief, few tumultuous weeks, and old friends, like Roger T. Pipe, www.rogreviews.com, who have come a long way in the past few years. There was the conversation on motherhood with starlet Bridget Kerkove, and the "hey I know you" glances of male "artist" Scott Nails, whom I had met this summer in Prague. There were other reunions, reconnections and parties, places where sex was promised to happen, and I promised myself I was only there to watch.

There was the Sex TV camera crew following around Porn PR person to the stars, Carly www.pornblography.com, and dinners with the heads of major companies. There was also the awards show that I had to miss for unexpected reasons, but it's that awards show which is the center of reason in Vegas the first week of January. This show brings the industry together for one glorious night; a night of best anal, best solo sex scene and best group sex, and that's before the parties ever get started.

I flew out of Vegas on Saturday, before the mayhem reached its pinnacle. And although I was sad to have to leave before it ended, I realize I'm entering a time in my career when my involvement with the porn industry may never end. I'm about to take my next leap of faith and commit to making some better sex. And Las Vegas was just the place to be this week, the place to realize that my life was about to change more than I ever imagined it could. And no, I don't have any plans to actually star in my own porn, but I do have other plans, a lot of other plans.

It's 2005. A whole new year, a whole new life. Do you think my parents will be proud?■

Dr. Dot,
I hate my labia, you know, the meat curtains. The lips are too long and one is a tad longer then the other. I won't make love in a lighted room, that is how embarrassed I am. Am I the only one with this problem? I want a pretty camel toe :(
No Name in NYC

Dear No Name,
Take note that men aren't really bothered much by most imperfections, they are just happy to get laid in general. If this is affecting your self esteem to the point where you feel unattractive, you could have them altered surgically. Bad side of that is you have to wait 6 weeks to have sex :(I found a place for you that deal with that: www.libertywomenshealth.com
Have a nice trim!
Dr. Dot

Hey Doc,
I met this stripper, super hot. She is crazy about me and we have tons of fun together and all, but now that I am falling for her, I can't control my jealousy. I go and watch her (like I did before we met) and want to punch the drooling idiots! I pretend it doesn't bother me, but it's eatin' me alive. Got any ideas? ASAP please.
Joey online

Hey Joey,
Oh come on, you must know by now you can't change a person. 'Pretty Woman' was just a movie, not a way of life. Would you like it if a girl tried to get you to stop doing your job or tried to change your social life? Probably not. All you can do it ignore it and love her for what she is. Staying out of the club and keeping busy will make you more interesting to her anyways. If you can't handle the heat, stay the hell out of the kitchen.

Jim Carrey 15 Minutes with

To The Mask, The Riddler and The Grinch, now add Count Olaf to Jim Carrey's resume of heavily disguised and over-the-top characters. The comedy superstar is barely recognizable under mounds of prosthetics, portraying the sinister storybook character and his alter egos in "Lemony Snicket's a Series of Unfortunate Events."

It is a darkly comic and stylish new family film based on the popular children's books by Daniel Handler. The story centers on a trio of kids whose parents perish in a terrible fire and are ordered into the custody of a very distant relative. That would be Carrey's villainous Count Olaf, who only wants to take custody of their vast inheritance.

Carrey was considerably more subdued in his other 2004 release, the whimsical romantic drama "The Eternal Sunshine of The Spotless Mind."

The 42-year-old actor recently celebrated a personal milestone when he officially became a dual citizen of America and his native Canada. On a less cheery note, he also recently publicly discussed his bout with depression.

Carrey's next film is an update of the husband-and-wife armed robbery comedy "Fun With Dick and Jane."

Q: Count Olaf thinks he is a great film actor. Was your portrayal of him influenced by any real-life actors?

A: There was no one in particular. Vocally, I was trying to get a little bit of Orson Welles with a sprinkle of Count Dracula. But I was trying to fashion the character after a bird of prey, the type of bird who waits until the nest is unguarded and then steals the eggs. Physically, I wanted to be like the illustrations from the books because the kids are used to them. He turned out looking a little like my dad though.

Q: What did you enjoy most about playing Count Olaf and his alter egos?

A: I love transforming. It's like Christmas morning for me when you get in the makeup trailer and you start playing around with things. We came up with three different characters who didn't get into the movie. But the whole process is exciting because it's such a fun thing to masquerade.

Q: How much of your improvisations made it to the final cut?

A: There was a lot of improvisation on the set. There's a ton of stuff that isn't in the movie that's really funny but doesn't further the story, so they cut it out. I face that a lot. In Hollywood, they call it "killing babies" and I've had to kill a lot of babies. But I didn't actually kill any babies. It's a figurative baby.

Q: Count Olaf is terrible with children. How do you act around your daughter?

For Advertising Information Call 201-703-0911

A: My daughter's so hip and so perceptive that you can't get away with anything except being yourself around her. She's really honest. Kids see things and they don't have any fear about saying if they think someone's fake or whatever. They don't worry about being nice to someone because they might run into them later on, or they might have some power over them. Kids are so quick at cutting through things and are just so instinctive. That's what's so great about the "Lemony Snicket" books. They give kids the credit they deserve.

Q: Do you think this is a role that might lead to an Oscar nomination?

A: I don't think about that. I honestly don't. You know, awards are beautiful when they go your way, it's fantastic. But for me, it's all about the work. It's about being in the moment on the set and there's no place I'd rather be than acting with other people and telling stories. I love it and it's a refuge, so that's what I'm motivated by in every respect. When you get a good review it's great, but it's really about cooking the meal.

Q: Out of all the characters you have played, who is your favorite?

A: Definitely Ace Ventura. No, I think it's the guy in "Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind" because of the depth of emotion and the feeling of loss that the character was going through, and also just the idea of being less accessible as a person on film. Generally, I play fairly colorful characters who leap out of the screen. That one was inviting you to come in.

Q: Do people ask you if there are two Jim Carreys, the funny one and the serious one, and which one you really are?

A: I get that a lot. "Who are you?" People seem to be really fascinated about who I really am, or maybe they're just saying that. I don't know how to define myself and I don't want to. I just want to play every role I do in a really original way.

Q: Are you a happy guy?

A: I'm everything. I experience every emotion.

Q: Can humor save the world?

A: No, but I think it can make it a bit more palatable. I don't kid myself that I'm changing the world, but I know that people can enjoy themselves for a couple of hours. For me, when I really sit down and think about it, sometimes I'm a Band-Aid and sometimes a little bit of a cure, but I'm not going to change the world.

Q: Lemony Snicket, the fictional author of the stories, always tells his readers, "Don't read my books." What would you say to kids who want to see this film?

A: Go if you've got nothing better to do. It's not my cup of tea but there's no accounting for taste.

LUDACRIS

Def Jam recordings

"The Red Light District"

One listen to the bumpin' and bass blasted on "The Red Light District" and it's pretty apparent that this multi platinum artist has not only set a goal but also nailed it. Of course what else would you expect from this Dirty South ambassador? Since he first exploded Ludacris has emerged not only as a chart topper and hit maker (his Def Jam South cds Back For The First Time, Word of Mouf and Chicken N Beer have sold over 10 million copies) but also an influential label head, in demand cameo king and up and coming actor. A mere 4 short years in the game, Ludacris has proven that he has the tenacity and talent to push hip-hop music, and himself to new heights. O' Reilly be damned.

THE GREAT:
"Child of the Night" f/Nate Dogg – Ludacris gets deep and it works by taking his style beyond the usual club-banger.

THE AVERAGE:
"Number One Spot" – Lucacris should get props for rhyming over the Austin Powers theme and getting Dora the Explorer into rhyme. He'll get props but this isn't the usual Luda highlight.

THE BAD:
"Pass Out" – Certainly the weakest lyrics on the entire record.

FRANKLY:
Ludacris is pulled into many directions on "Red Light District" including thug style, club-bangers, and some eccentric tracks. Ludacris is best when he tries to be something different because no one can do that better. There are a million thug-life rappers and only one Ludacris—stick with the schtick because its that Luda at his best.

AARON CARTER DRIVES OVER MATTRESS, ESCAPES BEFORE FLAMES ERUPT

AARON CARTER emerged unscathed from an accident late Wednesday night when he hit a mattress with his SUV, causing the vehicle to burst into flames.

The singer, 17, was driving his 2004 Cadillac Escalade on Florida's Turnpike, north toward Orlando, at around 12:30 a.m. when a mattress fell from the cargo bed of a delivery truck ahead of him, according to his spokesperson.

Carter drove over the mattress, which became lodged under the SUV and caught fire. He then pulled over and he and a passenger escaped to the side of the road where they watched as the vehicle exploded moments later.

Carter, who was heading to Orlando to shoot the cover photo for his upcoming album, Saturday Night, said in a statement, "Everything happened in such a whirlwind. It was like the mattress flew out of nowhere. You think you're invincible when you're behind the steering wheel of an SUV but you're not. I'm OK but you can imagine I'm still in shock."

Both Carter and his passenger were treated at the scene of the accident for minor bumps and bruises. Carter rejected hospital care, choosing instead to spend the night at a friend's house recuperating.

MATERIAL GIRL FOR VERSACE

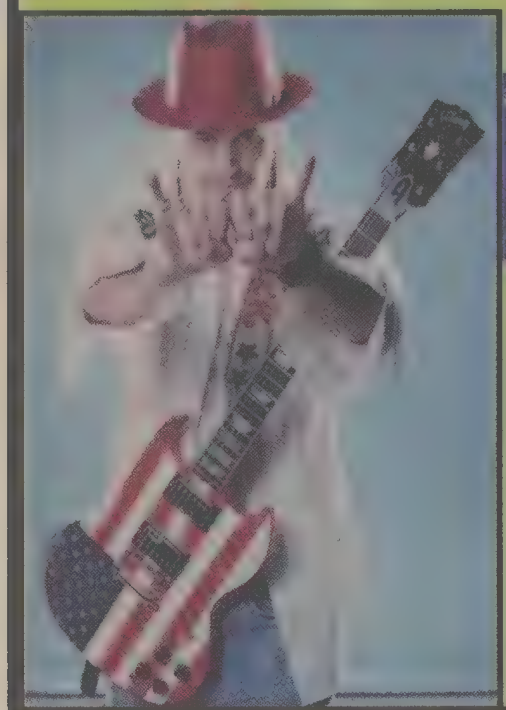
MADONNA is the new face of Versace. The high-profile ad campaign features Madge playing secretary in various office-themed settings. The 46-year-old singer is a long time pal of Donatella Versace, the artistic director of the couture line. Donatella says Madonna is an "icon" and "innovator" who "relates to women of all ages. Past "faces of Versace" include Christina Aguilera.

Jessica Simpson
ASSAULTED BY CREAMED SPINACH

JESSICA SIMPSON got an unwelcome extra helping of creamed spinach when she dined at the South Beach steakhouse Smith and Wollensky recently. The New York Post reports that a waiter accidentally dumped a bowl of creamed spinach all over Simpson's dress. Some of the restaurant staff started laughing at the incident, as did the MTV crew that filmed the whole thing for Simpson's reality show. Simpson's husband, NICK LACHEY, was not amused by the laughing onlookers, and demanded that the restaurant's manager make the staff apologize.

Lachey reportedly complained about the temperature of his filet mignon and later refused to pay the bill. Sources say that MTV picked up the tab.

In other news, the Tarrant Corporation announced that it will design, manufacture, and distribute Simpson's clothing line. The collection will include Jessica Simpson branded jeans and casual apparel in missy, junior, and large sizes. The lines are expected to launch in fall 2005. Tarrant also produces clothing lines for Express, Kmart and Macy's.



KID ROCK TOO VULGAR

HILARY DUFF and JOJO are slated to perform at PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH'S inauguration party on January 18th. According to the New York Times, KID ROCK was also booked to perform at the party but the Presidential Inauguration Committee has said that he is not confirmed yet. Many conservative supporters are not happy with Rock's participation because of the subject matter of his songs. In Rock's song "Pimp Of The Nation" he refers to former U.S. first lady Barbara Bush, "...but only pimpin' hoes with the big tush"

Rock was a Bush supporter in the last election.

Blizzard's "World of Warcraft" A Multiplayer Masterpiece

Publisher: Blizzard Entertainment
System: Windows 98 & Above
Cost: $49.99
Violence Rating: Teens (ages 13 & older)
Review Rating: ★★★★

The genre known as MMORPG (massively multiplayer online role-playing game) has changed online gaming from a solitary hobby into an addictive social community. Now, no matter who you are and what you do, be prepared to say goodbye to your real life as you delve deeper and deeper into Blizzard's latest masterpiece, World of Warcraft.

Those who play MMORPGs can interact w/thousands of other humans and non-player characters on the same server. Alone is fun, but teaming up w/others to fight monsters creates an entirely new experience.

Once you've chosen a server on which to play, it's time to create a character. First you must make allegiance w/the Alliance or the Horde, and then it's time to select a race. Those who decide to join the Alliance can be a dwarf, gnome, night elf or human, and those who select the Horde can be a troll, orc, undead or tauren.

Next, choose a class, which defines your character's abilities. Other classes include the healing priest, the mystical mage, the shape-shifting druid, the fearless hunter and the multitalented Paladin.

Newcomers to the MMORPG genre will find World of Warcraft to be very user-friendly. One great feature of this title is the ability for human players to fight one another. For fun, players on the same side can agree to a friendly duel. More advanced PvP is possible by creating a raiding party and invading enemy territory. Some of the more impressive battles can consist of up to 50 human players.

World of Warcraft is already the fastest-selling PC game in history, and the acronym says it all: Wow!

The Nightcrawler

By Dave Hoffman

Hey, today, is Jan. 12, and that's "I Don't Wanna Go To Work day." Why? Well, years ago, I wrote a song called "I Don't Wanna Go To Work," as well as a song called "112" (Get it, Jan 12 is 1/12?) so in attempt to get a jump start on the fanatical religion that was going to form around me as soon as I became a big star, I decided to start creating the holidays. I mean, it's not like I'm going to have time later. So, if you're ready to join presale, just know that the period between Nov. 2 and Jan. 12 is our holy time, so you don't have to go to work, as far as I'm concerned.

Now, for some stuff that is a little less absurd and easily accessible.

Last week we went out to Sullivan's in Hoboken. I figured something out. People always ask me which is the best bar around, and I always tell them that it's the one you're at, which is true enough. In Hoboken, it's useless to plan ahead which bar you're going to. Why? Because unless you want to walk all over the place, you should just plan to go to the bar that's closest to where you find a spot. The real question in Hoboken is not what's the best bar, but where is the best place to find a spot. I know the answer, but I ain't telling you! Two of the bartenders in Hoboken were meant to be in the 2003 Beautiful Bartenders of Hoboken Calendar that never happened. Rumor has it that one of them still works there.

Cooper's Dignity played at Connections in Clifton on Saturday. They're a heavy metal cover band, doing songs like Ace of Spades, Metal Health, and Electric Eye. The members are called the Eyepatch, the Mag, the Ice, and the Ink. They put on a puppet show, and apparently you're supposed to throw peanuts at them.

Brian and Dana from Manhattan brought everyone over to David Copperfields on the Upper East Side. Apparently, Brian lost the "Whose friends stay and party instead of going home early like a bunch of pussies" contest. Dana is the winner, there. Copperfields has a bunch of beers on tap, and they had three different brands of this beer called Hebrew Beer. Genesis, Jewbulation, and Messiah. They have an excuse for charging $6 for a glass. If they charged less, someone could comment that Hebrew beer is cheap, and that's just not a politically correct thing to say!

Dude, I'm moving to a Park Avenue duplex on the Upper East Side as soon as I get a chance! Should be any day now. Yep.

This coming Saturday is a tough call friends. It's the 10th anniversary of Maggie O's in Hoboken, the first bar I went to after moving to my apartment. I mean, it's not my 10th anniversary – I've only been going there for a year and a half, but I want to celebrate with those guys because it's always a good time, and DJ Mark will be there. On the other hand, Dropbox will be playing at O'Donoghue's in Hoboken. I'm probably going to hit both. A little pre show at Maggie O's, rock out at O'Donoghues, and Back to Maggie O's to unwind.

That's all for now, see ya!
